

Woman catches husband cheating... on Google's Street View

A FURIOUS wife has called in divorce lawyers after spotting her husband's car parked outside another womans house on Google.

The Sun said she saw the Range Rover while using the internet giant's new Street View service to snoop on a female friends home.

The hubby had claimed he was away on business, but his missus recognised his motor immediately because of its blinged-up hubcaps.

Street View has triggered a stream of complaints from people caught on camera since its launch in the UK on March 20, the tabloid said.

It said Google had removed some images, including a man sheepishly leaving a sex shop.
